Greenbelt Educators Receive ACE Awards at City Meeting

by Megan Gustafson

As numerous family members, friends and supporters looked on Monday night, filling the meeting room to near capacity, seven Greenbelt educators received the 2009 Advisory Committee on Education (ACE) Educator Awards.

Each award recipient was recognized because he or she had made exceptional contributions to the schools that Greenbelt children attend, said ACE Chair Jon Gardner.

Their outstanding performance in their roles earned them red and gold marble apple figurines, ACE T-shirts, a certificate and an invitation to march with ACE in the Labor Day Festival parade.

In addition the mayor and councilmembers, joined by Prince George's County Councilmember Ingrid M. Turner and Walter M. Moody, Constituent Affairs director for Maryland Delegate Justin D. Ross, expressed their gratitude and congratulations as they lined up to shake each awardee's hand.

When Jacob Novick, the parent liaison at Greenbelt Elementary

School, received his ACE Educator Award, Mayor Judith Davis emphasized the importance of his role by saying that "learning can occur anywhere and teaching can be done by anyone."

Novick said it was "an honor to be considered an educator." When introducing Novick, Gardner noted that Novick is the second person in his family to receive the ACE Educator Award; his mother Beth was honored with the award

Newcomer Alice Mitchell Heads Testing for Counseling Center

by Mary Moien

While the career of Greenbelt resident Alice Mitchell has taken her to eight states and several universities across the country, Mitchell believes she has found "home" here in Greenbelt. She got here by a happy coincidence and, as she says, "one of the most productive cups of coffee I have ever had."

In 2001 she was the coordinator of Student Affairs Research and Education at Arizona State University. While there, she became friendly with a colleague with whom she had coffee now and then. When Mitchell mentioned a chance to come to the Washington, D.C., area for a new position, the friend told her she should take the position and also buy her friend's home in a small community called Greenbelt.

As someone who had never owned a home, Mitchell thought her colleague crazy for suggesting this kind of a leap. But Mitchell herself was familiar with Greenbelt. She had been assistant coordinator for Research for the Department of Resident Life at the University of Maryland (UM) a few years earlier.

Intrigued, Mitchell flew from Arizona to Maryland to look for housing before the move and during the visit contacted her colleague's realtor. Mitchell says she found Greenbelt was "the kind of community in which I wanted to be involved. It had a neighborhood feel and a reasonable approach to consumption rather than a MacMansion/high consumption of resources approach." She liked the New Deal Café and compared it to a "funky coffee shop" she had loved in Madison, Wisc., while working there in education. Fast forward: the weekend of September 11, 2001, found Mitchell crossing the country in a big yellow Ryder van on her way to move to the old section of Greenbelt.

Since 2001 Mitchell has called old Greenbelt her home and since 2007 she has been at the University of Maryland College Park as director of testing for the UM Counseling Center. Mitchell laughs and then says that it seems that both of her predecessors in this position also lived in GHI.

Two-Alarm Apartment Fire Displaces 15 Residents

Fire departments from Greenbelt, College Park, West Lanham Hills and Berwyn Heights responded to a two-alarm fire at University Square Apartments on Tuesday, March 24 just after noon. It started in a basement apartment at 172 Westway on the corner of Lakeside Drive and went to the third floor according to an onlooker.

Fire and emergency medical service units arrived within minutes to the 3-story garden apartment building to find smoke coming from the top floor and roof according to a Prince George's Fire/EMS Department press release. An aggressive interior fire attack was established while other firefighters performed vertical ventilation on the roof.

A second alarm was sounded bringing a total of nearly 60 firefighters and medics to the scene, the department reported. While a few units stood by and were not used, approximately 45 firefighters worked for 30 minutes to extinguish the fire and another hour ensuring that it was entirely put out.

ACE Hosts Area Principals

by Mary Moien

The Greenbelt Advisory Committee on Education (ACE) held its annual meeting with school principals on February 24. The principals present included Reginald McNeil (Eleanor Roosevelt High School), Kenneth Jones (Turning Point Academy), Linda Sherwood (Springhill Lake Elementary School), Phyllis Gillens (Magnolia Elementary School), Kimberly Seidel (Greenbelt Elementary School) and Judy Austin (Greenbelt Middle School). St. Hugh's school was not represented.

The ACE members described the organization and the good results of past meetings with the principals. Meetings have resulted in some shared resources for the schools in the past. One very positive outcome is that students from Eleanor Roosevelt

High School (ERHS) have gone to Greenbelt Elementary School (GES) to work with students. ERHS sends students to all Greenbelt area elementary schools to offer mentoring for younger students but McNeil added that ERHS is always looking for more internship sites for their students.

Student Transitions

There was a lot of discussion about transitions – from elementary to middle; from middle to high school. McNeil described a program used this past summer – supported by the county – called Bridge to Excellence, that was a big success with incoming middle school students. Seidel says GES really looks forward to the now-annual basketball game between

April Artful Afternoon Offers ASL Quest Play “Mosaics”

The next Artful Afternoon will be held on Sunday, April 5 from 1 to 4 p.m. at the Greenbelt Community Center and will feature art for everyone, with a free American Sign Language (ASL) art project, performance and workshop given by Quest artists. Quest is a 10-year-old Lanham-based organization of artists, educators and volunteers committed to using the arts to reach all people.

The Play

Dressed in identical black trench coats, five expressionless actors dart randomly across the stage. Gripped with fear, they find security in their sameness. So begins “Mosaic,” an exploration of societal pressure to conform and the individual’s need for freedom. The stark beauty of actors on an empty stage and the vibrant series of vignettes resonate across languages and cultures.

Performed by Quest’s international touring company and incorporating mime, movement, gesture, dance and sign language, “Mosaic” touches the soul. The play will be offered at 2 p.m. and is meant for both deaf and hearing people of all ages. The work is serious in tone and addresses themes including discrimination.

Arts Workshops

From 1 to 3 p.m. Artist-in-residence Tom Baker will hold an ASL art workshop, teaching basic ASL signs and how to incorporate them into artwork.

For those who have ever taken a sheet or a towel and pretended to be Superman or Miss America or who have ever played with that sheet or towel to see the different ways it could be moved, Quest’s fabric workshop at 3 p.m. will encourage participants to explore creative ways to use fabric, then weave their creations into performance.

Every month Greenbelt’s Artful Afternoon also offers a studio open house with the Center’s artists-in-residence, Greenbelt Museum historic home tours and current historical exhibit. These activities are open to the public and free, with the exception of a nominal fee for the house tour. Visitors can also enter to win free tickets for live performances at the Greenbelt Arts Center and the Clarice Smith Performing Arts Center.

For details visit www.greenbelt-md.gov/arts or call 240-542-2057.

Astronomical Society Upcoming Events

The next meeting of the Greenbelt Astronomical Society will be on Thursday, April 2 at 7:30 p.m. at the H.B. Owens Science Center. Dr. Michael Shay of the University of Delaware will be the featured speaker. His topic will be “space weather – understanding the space environment outside of the Earth’s atmosphere where satellites and astronauts roam.”

Shay is an assistant professor in the Department of Physics and Astronomy at the University of Delaware. His research interests include computational plasma physics and magnetic reconnection.

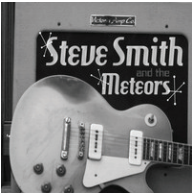

Shay’s presentation will kick off the 100 Hours of Astronomy events in Greenbelt. 100 Hours of Astronomy is part of the International Year of Astronomy and consists of a wide range of public outreach activities held worldwide. One of its key goals is to have as many people as possible look through a telescope as Galileo did for the first time 400 years ago.

All are welcome. H.B. Owens Science Center is at 9601 Greenbelt Road (adjacent to DuVal High School) in Lanham.

Dedication, Parties

Other events in Greenbelt related to 100 Hours of Astronomy-include dedication of the Greenbelt City Observatory on Saturday, April 4 at 2 p.m. at Northway Field and star parties Saturday and Sunday evenings, also at Northway Field. The star parties are a joint effort of the Astronomical Society of Greenbelt and the Goddard Astronomy Club.

Wrestling for Renewal

The Wrestler opens Friday at Greenbelt, starring Mickey Rourke and Marisa Tomei. Both actors received Oscar nominations for their performances in this film. Rourke portrays a wrestler past his prime, trying to repair his relationship with his daughter (Evan Rachel Wood) and rebuild his career by a rematch with his old arch-nemesis. He also works part-time as a bagger at a grocery store, lives in a trailer and is courting a stripper (played by Tomei).

The film was directed by Darren Aronofsky (Pi, Requiem for a Dream) and written by Robert Siegel (former editor-in-chief of The Onion). The Wrestler is informed more by Aronofsky’s dark view of family relationships than the satire of The Onion’s fake news. Rated R for violence and nudity, this movie runs 111 minutes.

“We can’t pay you any more money these days but we can thank you,” County Councilmember Turner said emphatically as she shook the hand of award recipient Heather Forest.

Forest, who teaches English as a Second Language at Springhill Lake Elementary, said it was “an incredible honor to be recognized for something I love to do.”

Terri Childress, sixth grade teacher at Magnolia Elementary School, spoke of her family’s legacy in education as she received the ACE Educator Award.

“It starts with your family. . .” she said, adding that her grandmother was one of the first black women to earn a college degree.

Turning Point Academy third grade teacher Knakia Nelson was recognized as a “dynamic and effective educator” who is “committed to improving the quality of education for all students,” as she was introduced by Gardner.

Nelson, who has been at Turning Point Academy for three years, said she was “truly blessed to work with the great people and staff” at Turning Point Academy.

When introducing Lynne Gekas, first grade teacher at St. Hugh’s School, Gardner read comments from her students, who said that she “turns work into fun” and that “she’s awesome.”

Gekas thanked her family for their support, saying they make her job easier. “For 13 years my family has had my back,” she said.

As she received her ACE Educator Award, Portia Moore, the sixth grade counselor at Greenbelt Middle School, said that she has “always wanted to be a light in darkness,” helping others to achieve their potential and know they’re cared about.

She is an educator who “consistently goes above and beyond the call of duty,” Gardner said as he introduced her.

Kathleen (Kate) Deery, a social studies teacher at Eleanor Roosevelt High School, expressed gratitude to the City of Greenbelt for their support of her school. “You’ve always been there for us,” she said.

Deery said her colleagues at Eleanor Roosevelt High School are also deserving of ACE Educator Awards and that working with them is like playing tennis with someone who’s more skilled than you: It makes you better, she said.

After each award recipient was introduced and honored, the entire group posed for a photo with members of ACE and the government officials in attendance.

her staff and the staff at Greenbelt Middle School (GMS).

All of the city elementary schools want to work with the GMS to bring over their outgoing 6th graders for a visit near the end of the year to assist in their own transitions.

Sherwood added information about the transition from Pre-K to kindergarten and says having that early start does a great job readying young students.

Parent Teacher Groups

There was a discussion about the role of the parent teacher organization or association in the schools. Gillens said that the Magnolia Elementary School (MES) PTO is much more active this year – due in part to their dynamic president. They have arranged many events such as family movie night, dances, guest speakers – and have been supported by their parent liaison surveying the parents to learn what they are interested in. The PTO is also working on projects to obtain school security cameras and a fence beautification. MES continues to need more volunteers for extracurricular activities.

The ERHS PTSA is hoping to get more student involvement in their organization this year. They have a membership of 300 paid members. One very successful event was their father-son breakfast which brought in 200 people. They usually have 30 to 40 people at the monthly meeting. McNeil expressed concerns that there is not enough participation in extracurricular activities by ERHS students.

The GMS PTO continues to struggle. Although Austin reports they have 50 paid members, they only have about three active members. She is stumped as to how to get more parental involvement. She thanked ACE liaison Dave Whiteman for his extra support and for sometimes being the only representation at school events – such as basketball games. Other principals suggested she acknowledge parent participation with a trophy or extra credit for students whose parents attend. They all agreed that having teachers present at meetings can be a big draw – although it is sometimes difficult to get them there.

Jones explained that at Turning Point Academy (TPA), parent involvement is part of the charter school contract, part of the admissions process and therefore he actually is able to take attendance at their PTA meetings.

GES has an incredibly active and supportive PTA that writes grants, puts up murals, brings in speakers, develops a student directory for all parents and donates books to the library. Students get a homework “pass” if their parent attends the PTA meeting.

At Springhill Lake Elementary

School there is an active PTA but it has to deal with the transient nature of the school population. Sherwood reported that half of the students who start the school year are not there in June. The school population is quite diverse; about 50 percent African American (and half of them are directly African), 50 percent Hispanic and about four percent others. They currently have 69 homeless children in the school. Therefore, the school needs lots of unique supports for these children and bilingual presenters for their PTA meetings and events. SHL is always in need of socks, white shirts and coats for their kids. The uniform has been very helpful in making the children all feel more equal. The Strengthening Families program at SHL run by Greenbelt CARES is very popular as it offers a Spanish component.

Parent Liaisons

All the schools gave specific examples of how their parent liaisons contribute to the success of the relationship between the parents and the schools. The principals are all very concerned about the possibility that this position will be eliminated due to budget cuts.

Taken from notes provided by city staff.

Littering fines range from $75 to $2,500 around the region, with illegal dumping penalties of up to $40,000 and/or five-year jail sentences. The object of the campaign is to make people aware that, from cigarette butts to construction waste, it is not worth it to litter.

SHL Arsonist to Be Sentenced April 2

According to the Greenbelt Police Department, the Prince George's County Fire Department has advised that Jeremiah C. Jones, the Springhill Lake arsonist, is to be sentenced in the Greenbelt Federal Courthouse, between 2 and 4 p.m. on Thursday, April 2.

Jeremiah C. Jones pled guilty August 14, 2008, in federal court to nine counts of arson at the Springhill Lake Apartments (now Empirian Village). Jones had lived in the complex when the fires were set between March and August 2007. According to The Washington Post, the fires caused more than $2 million in damages.

Jones also admitted setting other fires over the past three years. He faces a sentence of a minimum of five years and a maximum of 20 years for each count, according to the U.S. Attorney.

requirement for this position that they don't tell you when you apply," she says. Her office is responsible for a wide range of testing including the Praxis test for teachers seeking to be certified by the state, as well as students taking GRE, ACT and LSAT tests. The center also offers the proctoring of tests for those needing to complete a specialized test.

Greenbelt

Mitchell is concluding her term as chair of GHI's Sustainable Design and Practice ad hoc committee after chairing that group for more than three years. That committee developed the rain barrel program and held a number of workshops concerning various areas of sustainable living.

Together with Cynthia Newcomer, Mitchell is a founder of a small informal group, Greenbelt Neighbors Alliance (GNA). Though still developing, GNA was formed after discussions on the Greenbelt listserv contained postings Mitchell thought seemed divisive – especially concerning the Spellman overpass. She decided to post a note to the listserv herself, brief and not accusatory. Several residents wrote back supporting her thoughts.

Though still quite new, small and "feeling its way," GNA is emerging as an organization concerned with community unity, she says, through an informed approach to community issues. One area on which GNA has focused is bringing the various residential and racial/ethnic groups together, as well as on voter education, turnout and electoral reform. GNA hopes to work with other community groups and provide city-wide communication. Not an official city group, the alliance searches for ways that all three sections of the city can come together – One Greenbelt.

Author

Mitchell is proud co-editor of the recently published "Making Good on the Promise: Student Affairs Professionals with Disabilities," a book with 20 authors from across the country. All the authors are student affairs professionals; most of them have disabilities. The book was published by University Press of America (UPA); information can be found on the UPA website, www.univpress.com.

Mitchell is especially proud that this book was simultaneously published in paper and in a format accessible to readers with vision impairments or other disabilities that make printed text a challenge. Those who need books in a different format often have to wait to have a book "translated" into a format they can use.

Others who do not need that format can pick up and read any book they wish from the moment it is published. Mitchell commented, "When a book is not simultaneously published in both print and in accessible text, it unfairly places the person with the disability at a disadvantage. If instead, we work 'from the get go' to publish materials in an accessible format, everyone starts from the same place."

She noted that many publications, such as brochures and other information sources, could take the same approach with some forethought, the kind of forethought that builds a truly inclusive community, across not only race and ethnicity but other areas of human difference as well.

When asked about free-time activities, Mitchell laughed. She said she spends much of her free time as an elected leader for ACPA, the American College Personnel Association, a 9,000 member international association in student affairs. (Information on ACPA and the profession of student affairs can be found at www.myacpa.org.)

When Mitchell finally gets done with all that "fun," she also loves hiking and other outdoor sports, including kayaking, as well as jazz. She particularly loves the Farmers Market in Greenbelt. It is an additional benefit, she says, to add to all the Greenbelt benefits about which she is still learning. "Greenbelt is Great" says Mitchell, echoing the mantra on sweatshirts sometimes seen around town.

"The people with whom I work at University of Maryland think I am the official promoter of the city based on my comments," she laughs.

Anyone who knows of a Greenbelt woman resident of significant accomplishments and whose story is relatively unknown in Greenbelt may send a letter or an email to newsreview@greenbelt.com with the details for next year's series. This series was originated and organized by David Lange.

Prayer of the Blessed Virgin (Never known to fail)

Oh, most Beautiful Flower of Mt. Carmel, Fruitful Divine Splendor of Heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in my necessity. Oh Star of the Sea, help me and show me here you are my Mother. Oh Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth, I humbly beseech You from the bottom of my heart to succor me in my necessity (Make Request). There are none that can withstand your power. Oh, Mary, conceived without sin, pray with us who have recourse to thee (Three times). Say this prayer for three consecutive days. Publish it and it will be granted to you. Grateful thanks. – AH

According to the fire department an electrical malfunction in a terrace level apartment ignited a fire that extended to the upper floors by way of the interior of the walls within the building. Fire investigators determined the cause of the fire to be accidental and attributed to an electrical malfunction. Fire loss is estimated at $75,000.

While there were no injuries to either occupants or firefighters, 15 people were displaced including eight children according to Greenbelt Fire Chief Brian Rudy. One cat was also rescued. The Fire/EMS Department's Citizen Services Unit provided assistance to the five families affected. These residents will be placed in temporary shelter by apartment management according to the departmental press release.

Prince George's Acting Fire Chief Eugene A. Jones was on the fireground and commended the operations of the firefighters. "Their hard work resulted in limiting the amount of fire damage to the building," he said. He also commended the efforts of the incident commanders for their forward thinking in deployment of the resources to extinguish the fire while keeping everyone safe.

City Explores Upgrading Streetlights at Empirian Village

The Greenbelt city staff is exploring the possibility of joining with other local governments through the Metropolitan Council of Governments (COG) to utilize stimulus funding to upgrade streetlights. Greenbelt already has a Community Development Block Grant award of $100,000 to be used for upgrading lighting in the Empirian Village neighborhood. These funds must be spent by December 31 of this year according to David Moran in a series of emails released by the city manager's office between him and George Nichols, a staff member at COG.

In Empirian Village most streetlights are high-pressure sodium vapor lights of 70 or 150 watts with a few others at major intersections at 250 watts and others at 100 watts. The city is considering replacing the 37 70-watt fixtures with ones at 150 watts.

Moran said in his emails that the city would like to utilize some sort of new energy technology (like LED or induction) but based upon initial conversations with representatives of PEPSCO that does not appear to be a viable option. He suggested to COG the possibility of a demonstration project if it could be done within the year time frame.

Nichols responded that there was similar interest in other local governments and that PEPSCO was also interested in moving forward. It is anticipated that the matter will be pursued in future meetings.
